Parents' Right to Know

Military Information

Federal law requires schools that receive federal aid to give military recruiters the names, addresses, and phone numbers of high school juniors and seniors, and to provide military recruiters with the same access to students as employers and college recruiters. Any parent or guardian wanting this information withheld from the military must make an objection, in writing, within two weeks of receiving this notice, to the main office. (Please use the attached form to make your request.) If this is your preference, a request must be made on a yearly basis and should specifically indicate withholding from the military only.

The No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 requires schools to release your child's name, address and telephone number to military recruiters unless you request in writing that this information not be released for your child.
